

and the rice so it was easy. I surprised myself. It was actually really, really good. John brought eclairs. He also kept going on about my Fettuccini Alfredo after seeing it in the recipe book. He looked through the whole book. I enjoy our little dinners. Often he starts rambling about some story or another and I can't follow, or he'll tell me how wonderful I ~~am~~ am that I cooked all that. It's also nice to cook like that sometimes. Knowing there won't be leftovers.

Love

Samantha ♡ xoxo

Nov 28th

Hi Bill,

This is my november letter, actually written in November.

At the moment it is the last week of school. Right now we are doing exam Review, and wrap up stuff. I can't wait to be done. I want to go to Metrotown and downtown to do some shopping and walking around. This year I have also been more active at attending the Sunday night dinners at Lisa and Aarons. However these past four weeks John and I have had to fend for ourselves.

The first week I texted John "come over whenever" after he said he'd leave in 15 minutes. I said it as an expression. Well, John's friend said that because I said that, he could leave whenever, so he got here at almost 7! We got to the chinese buffet with 10 min to spare. For dessert we each had three cinnamon Buns.

The next weekend mom was in ~~home~~ town. John bought a ham and we had a lovely dinner with Lies and the kids. We had a nice hangout, Lies bought mashed potatoes, it was a full house.

The next week Alex was in town. I also wanted to make a real dinner. I made the parmesan crusted chicken (which I made the week before for mom as a way to bribe her to stay Sunday night), roasted Veggies and a salad. Alex was surprised, she was questioning the mayo but liked it in the end. For dessert John brought ice cream, butterscotch sauce and marble cake.

This week I decided to cook again. I had planned on tacos, but since I just got back from Victoria, I didn't want to go grocery shopping. I already had the veggies, chicken,