Hi Bill,

It's the 2nd week of work, which means that it's back to work. It was busy a few days but also slow. It's a weird time but we have at least one event every month until may so it's going to be wild. But I'm looking forward to it.

Today it started snowing. However, it was very wet, so it's pretty slushy out. Hopefully it won't all freeze and become ice.

I don't like the idea of salt since it's not super good for the environment. I got kitty litter, and it worked at first, ^{to create traction} but then it became muddy and not tractiony. So I'll have to try something else. Maybe go to home depot. Except at this point it's mostly melted from the rain.

It's weird not having to do home work. I have all this extra time I didn't used to have. I have to start coming up with things to do.

I've included my rent money for the month. I think this is what I'll do. Seems easiest.
